

Talent Pool Solves ECC Problem

Necessity, the mother of inventions, has again solved a problem.

This time the problem was focused upon the lack of an adequate student handbook to use with the Craig Reading Machines utilized in English B classes at El Camino College.

To solve the problem, Dr. Marvyl Doyle and Mrs. V. Marie Mittwer, English B instructors, pooled their talents and wrote the book themselves.

The handbook, "Reading

Program V.P.R., Vocabulary, Preview, Read," published in July by Craig Research, Inc., is a manual for one of four different teaching kits produced by the Craig Corporation, manufacturers of reading equipment.

The V.P.R. program is designed to help students improve their vocabulary and reading-study skills. It allows each person to proceed at his own rate.

Dr. Doyle and Mrs. Mittwer were contacted by Craig Research Inc. and asked to write a manual for a teaching kit.

"We wrote the book because we had nothing that would suit our needs," Mrs. Mittwer explained.

This year is the first time the kit, prepared especially for junior colleges, has been used.

Although the credits for English B cannot be transferred to another college, "many students enroll in the course because they find it beneficial in other studies," Mrs. Mittwer added.

READING AIDS . . . A new handbook is used by El Camino College student Christine Plakos with Craig Reading Machines. The instructional aid was written by instructors Marvyl Doyle and Marie Mittwer. Publication of the handbook is a major step forward in classes designed to improve reading skills.
